In 2022, 1,413 people died of overdose in Philly.

What is an overdose?

An overdose happens when a drug or combination of drugs overwhelms a person's body.

Overdoses can happen with many substances, including:

- opioids such as heroin and fentanyl
- stimulants such as cocaine
- or a combination of more than one substance.

When experiencing an overdose, a person may become unresponsive or have trouble breathing. Like a poisoning, an overdose can result in death.

In Philadelphia from 2018-2022, overdose deaths increased by 87% in the Black population, increased by 43% in the Hispanic population, and decreased by 12% in the white population.

What's happening in Philly?

The drug supply in Philadelphia has become more unpredictable than ever before.

This means that many people may not know what they are actually using or how strong it is. The change in the drug supply makes drug use more dangerous than it was in the past.

Lower the risk of an overdose:

- Use fentanyl test strips on all substances
- Start with a small dose and go slowly
- Try not to use alone
- Avoid mixing drugs
- Have naloxone on hand and ready

Most overdose deaths in Philadelphia take place inside the home.

Carry naloxone and know how to use it.

Signs of an overdose

- Irregular heartbeat
- Slow, shallow or stopped breathing
- Not responding to your voice or touch
- Lips or nails are very pale, blue-ish purple, or gray for darker skin

What to do if you think someone is having an overdose

1. Call 911 immediately.
2. Administer naloxone if available.
3. Try to keep the person awake & breathing.
4. Lay the person on their side to prevent them from choking.
5. Stay with the person until emergency assistance arrives.

What is naloxone?

Naloxone is a medication that can reverse and opioid overdose and save someone's life.

Naloxone temporarily blocks the effects of opioids, helping a person breathe again.

Narcan® is a well-known brand of naloxone.

Naloxone is safe to use and it won't hurt someone if they're on a different drug. It takes 2-5 minutes to take effect and may require more than one dose. Narcan is not addictive and cannot be used to get high.

How to use naloxone

The most important thing Philadelphians can do to stop overdoses is to carry naloxone and know how to use it.

Substance Use and Addiction

What is substance use?

Substance use refers to any use of drugs. This includes legal drugs and illegal drugs. It may include mild, moderate, or severe substance use disorder as well as recreational drug use.

Why do people use substances?

- To feel good. Some people use drugs for the positive feelings that come with it.
- To feel better. Some people use drugs to help with negative feelings of stress, anxiety, depression, or drug withdrawal.
- To do better. Some people use drugs because they believe it makes them perform better at school, work, or sports.
- Curiosity and social pressure. Some people, especially young people, may try drugs because they are curious or to fit in with friends.

What is addiction?

Addiction is characterized as the inability to control the impulse to use drugs, even when there are negative consequences.

What is substance use disorder?

Substance use disorder (SUD) is a medical diagnosis characterized by intense, uncontrolled use of a substance to the point where use impairs a person's ability to function in day-to-day life.

Common Substances

What are opioids?

Opioids are a class of drugs used to control pain.

- Prescription pain relievers such as OxyContin, morphine, percocet (percs) and vicodin (pills)
- Street drugs such as heroin and fentanyl
- Treatment medications such as methadone and buprenorphine

What are stimulants?

A class of drugs that makes a person feel more alert by speeding up the messages traveling between the brain and body. Stimulants are also called “uppers”.

- Street drugs such as cocaine (crack), amphetamines (speed) and meth.
- Caffeine and nicotine

What happens if different drugs are mixed?

Mixing different types of drugs can make it harder to predict the effects and can put someone at a higher risk of overdose.

Starting the Journey

What is recovery and what could that look like for me?

Recovery is a process of change that may let individuals improve their health and wellness, live a self directed life, and reach their full potential. Recovery looks different for everyone. It is not a “one size fits all” solution.

What treatment options are available?

Residential and hospital stay:

If your assessment shows you'd benefit from staying at a hospital or inpatient program, the behavioral health professional you met with will contact your insurance to get approval and find a program that meets your needs.

Outpatient treatment:

Many people recover from substance use disorders without needing to stay at a hospital or medical facility. During outpatient treatment, you can visit a behavioral health professional to access the services and medication you may need. The goal is to build coping skills when dealing with cravings.
